As the leading global association of mutual funds, ETFs, and other regulated funds, the Investment Company Institute (ICI) encourages adherence to high ethical standards, promotes public understanding, and works to advance the interests of funds, their shareholders, directors, and advisers.

Reporting to ICI's President & CEO, the Managing Director of the Independent Directors Council (IDC) advises and represents IDC, ICI, independent directors and the investment company industry on issues relating to fund governance matters and the role of investment company directors. The position is responsible for coordinating and integrating IDC's efforts with ICI's legal, research, operations, government affairs and public communications functions. The individual represents IDC at regional meetings of directors, at fund board meetings, as well as on matters before the Securities and Exchange Commission, and, as appropriate, the Congress. The position also manages and oversees the work of staff engaged in IDC-related matters.

If you have the following credentials, we encourage you to contact Heidrick & Struggles:

- 15+ years relevant experience in government, trade associations, asset management, law firm or in-house counsel, with knowledge of fund operations and extensive experience in securities and financial services regulations; experience working with fund directors is desirable.
- An educational background that includes a law degree or MBA preferred or equivalent work experience.
- Deep familiarity with the fund governance regulatory framework and the fiduciary responsibilities of fund directors. Understanding of the operations of investment companies and their service providers.
- Experience dealing with anti-trust compliance requirements. Comprehensive understanding of government and regulatory environment and processes. High capacity for critical legal and factual analysis.
- Strong leadership and management skills to include proven ability to motivate and manage a team of legal and other professional staff in support of IDC and ICI policy objectives.
- Exceptional presentation skills with the ability to communicate effectively in writing and orally. Ability to outreach, build relationships and respond to needs of director community.
- A strategic focus with a high degree of innovativeness and creativity. Strong ability to develop strategic vision for the IDC by listening, anticipating needs and engaging internally and externally.
- Ability to anticipate and interpret market changes as they relate to member needs, envision the future and set goals and plans to address member needs, and ensure IDC remains the leader in the director education space.

ICI offers competitive pay, excellent benefits to include a comprehensive medical plan, generous 401(k) retirement savings plan, paid leave, commuting subsidies, and tuition reimbursement as well as training and development opportunities. Based in Washington, DC, ICI is conveniently located next to McPherson Square Metro station.
