

AMERICA'S 401(k)s

(K)nowledge is Power

Policymakers say that workers should be entitled to clear and complete information about their retirement plans.

America's mutual funds couldn't agree more.

Our industry has been leading the call for improved disclosure, so employees and employers alike can understand key investment information in retirement plans, for 30 years.

If their 401(k) invests in mutual funds, workers already can learn what they need to know about fees, risks, investment objectives, historic returns, and who's managing their money.

They need to get the same information for all of their investment options—clearly, concisely, without information overload.

Can disclosure be better? Absolutely, and ICI will work with Congress and regulators to improve it. Let's make America's retirement system even better—by building on the success of 401(k).
